ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This volume, and the set of which it is a part, are the culmination of four years of effective cooperation in the area of increased understanding of the Jewish community on the part of the general American public. "American Jews in World War II," the final edition in the annual series of volumes which, during the war, recorded the story of American Jewry's participation in the war, will from all indications receive due recognition as important American history and significant Jewish history.

These books developed out of the work of the Bureau of War Records of the National Jewish Welfare Board. The publication of the volumes was entrusted to the Public Relations Committee of the National Jewish Welfare Board, under whose auspices the wartime public relations program of the American Jewish community was carried out. That committee was made up of representatives of the Board and of the American Jewish Committee, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the American Jewish Congress, the Jewish War Veterans of the United States, and the Jewish Labor Committee. To all of these organizations, and to the men who represented them, grateful acknowledgement is herewith made.

For the difficult but highly essential task of assembling the great mass of war records, we are profoundly indebted to the thousands of zealous and devoted men and women around the country who participated in the work of local war records committees; and for the herculean and comprehensive work of compiling and analyzing that ponderous amassment of material, we voice our gratitude to Dr. Louis I. Dublin, distinguished statistician, who served as chairman of the Technical and Advisory Committees of the National Jewish Welfare Board's Bureau of War Records, and to Dr. Samuel C. Kohs, outstanding social scientist, for his imaginative, indefatigable and inspiring direction of the day-to-day work of the Bureau.

Acknowledgement is made also to the able men who served with Dr. Dublin on the Technical Committee and who gave generously of their time and skill in planning and guiding this great work: Harry L. Lurie, vice chairman; Professor Salo W. Baron, Elisha M. Friedman, William B. Herlands, Dr. Maurice B. Hexter, Leffert Holz, Professor Daniel Katz, Dr. Isador Lubin, Dr. Julius B. Maller, Herbert H. Marks, Professor Otto Nathan, Dr. Morton Seidenfeld, Dr. Maurice Taylor, and Dr. Joseph Zubin.

Acknowledgement is further made to the professional staff of the Bureau, who contributed so substantially to the ultimate success of the enterprise: Dr. David Turteltaub, for his contribution on authentications; Jerome Seidman, for his population and sampling studies; Irving Levin, for his study of physicians and dentists in service; Joshua Marcus, Edward Burstein, Jerome Schuchter, Fay Emanuel, for their contributions; Samuel Leff, who got the work of the Bureau under way until Dr. Kohs could take over; Selma Schnaper, whose intelligent application to the many problems that arose made the over-all job lighter; the clerical force, without whose loyalty and unflagging interest the work could not have been successfully concluded, and Arthur Weyne, whose function of liaison between the Bureau of War Records and the Public Relations Department included the initiation and follow-up of the authentications procedure, a cornerstone in the structure of the Bureau.

Acknowledgement is also due I. Kaufman, distinguished newspaperman who, together with Jerome Schuchter, prepared the material in the Preface from the larger work, running into a volume by itself—as yet unpublished—written by Dr. Kohs.

To the Anglo-Jewish press special thanks are due for its whole-hearted cooperation in presenting the material made available by the Bureau through the JWB Public Relations Department; for its invaluable aid in the work of gathering war records, and for the generosity of its columns in printing war records forms and otherwise furthering the Bureau's program and activities.

Acknowledgement is made to Thomas J. Watson and Jarvis Bell, of the International Business Machines Company, whose magnificent aid, freely rendered, in tabulating the material of the Bureau made vital information readily available and thus increased its value incalculably.

And, finally, acknowledgement is made to Milton Weill, who as chairman of the JWB's Public Relations Committee, demonstrated a quality of devotion and leadership which accounted in great measure for the success which attended the group's efforts, and under whose chairmanship these volumes were prepared for publication. Serving with Mr. Weill on the Publication Committee for "American Jews in World War II" have been:

Dr. Louis I. Dublin, Benjamin R. Epstein, J. George Fredman, Benjamin A. Gebiner, Richard B. Gutstadt, Adolph Held, Dr. Samuel C. Kohs, Louis Kraft, Bernard Postal, Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, Milton H. Richman, Richard C. Rothschild, Walter Rothschild, John Slawson, Judge Meier Steinbrink, Frank L. Weil, and Arthur Weyne.

Strenuous efforts have been made to include in this volume the name of every American Jewish man and woman in uniform who received recognition for valor above the ordinary requirements of duty, and of those who suffered injury or death inflicted by the foe. Many names will, inevitably, be omitted, but the omission will not be for lack of application to the task at hand. The record as it stands and as it is presented in the great folio of pages that follow, shows with unchallengeable clarity that the Jewish community of this country was unstinting in the devotion, zeal and sacrifice with which it labored for the common goal.

THE NATIONAL JEWISH WELFARE BOARD

FOREWORD

The men and women who, in the uniform of the United States, joined with the embattled peoples of other nations in the great fight against marauding evil, were of one race: the human race; of one faith: the faith of liberty and freedom; of one color: the color of sacrifice, courage, and determination.

Among them were persons of all faiths, national origins, and economic backgrounds. They fought with one goal, with one inspired will against the most powerful foe ever to confront mankind. They fought – and vanquished – the foe's legions, his snipers both in and out of uniform, his tireless and pervasive propaganda of darkness and chaos.

In the ranks of our land armies, our sea forces, our air might, American Jews marched, American Jews fought, American Jews suffered, bled, died. They behaved as heroes, behaved as men, behaved as Americans. They made their sacrifices side by side with their fellows, on wreck-strewn beaches, in blood-stained waters, in stricken and plummeting aircraft. The Jews of this nation were there, fighting with valor and full measure—and in full proportion to their numbers in the American community.

This book, AMERICAN JEWS IN WORLD WAR II, tells the story of Jewish participation in the war and tells it in memorable fashion. The contribution made by Jewish fighting men to the victory over the dread enemy is an absorbing chronicle.

AMERICAN JEWS IN WORLD WAR II is issued by the National Jewish Welfare Board, which earned from the War and Navy Departments a hearty joint commendation for "exceptional aid in the successful prosecution of the war and in the preservation of the enduring values of American democracy." The JWB, in making available to the public the authentic record of Jewish participation in the great conflict, is adding a vital chapter to the history of this nation.

The contribution of American Jews in uniform was an impressive and significant one, and America will not fail to remember it. Their graves, found in every American military cemetery tragically spaded up by World War II and mutely marked with the Star of David standing amid the Crosses—their occupants companions in death as in life—are irresistibly symbolic: symbols of rare clarity and deep meaning; symbols of strength and fortitude and faith.

That faith — gleaming and unshatterable — will keep our democracy virile and enduring. That faith is a tribute to the supremacy of the spirit, to the new hope and the new vision which animates our thinking for the future. Let us all, uniting in deed and spirit, marshalling the forces of justice and brotherhood, prepare to march down the broad avenue of the future in ranks big enough, brave enough and American enough to embrace all.

National Jewish Welfare Board

INTRODUCTION

The record of the service to our country of more than a half million Jewish men and women in the fight for human liberty and decency is a source of great pride and satisfaction to all Jews. For the quality of this service has been high. For many reasons we had to have the cold, hard facts of our participation in the war. Now we have them and we have a glorious story to tell.

A great deal of effort and time and money went into this undertaking. If ours were a well ordered world, it would hardly have been necessary to put so much effort into it. But the circumstances of the war period and of the events leading up to it compelled us to do this job and to produce a record that would convince through its reliability even those who would malign us.

The assembling and analysis of the great mass of war records was a long and hard job. There were difficulties to surmount at every step. Yet we have spared no pains to make sure that everything that went into our war record files and eventually into the published record was accurate. Thoroughness and care was applied to every aspect of our work. Fortunately, we were able to tap the resources and abilities of loyal and cooperative people all over the country. Many distinguished and able statisticians and social scientists served on our technical committees. We benefited from excellent leadership and cooperation on the part of the officers and the professional staff of the National Jewish Welfare Board. Above all, however, credit is due to leaders and volunteers in many hundred American cities and towns who have helped to assemble this record. The Jews of America will forever be grateful for what they did on behalf of this vital and gigantic effort, and I too take this opportunity to extend my hearty thanks and appreciation.

LOUIS I. DUBLIN
Chairman
Technical Committee on War Records

PREFACE

The Organization

In the Summer of 1941 half the world was at war, and war clouds were already gathering over the U.S.A. It seemed probable that soon we, too, would be drawn into the conflict. The Selective Service Law was in operation, and American Jews, like other Americans, were being drafted into the United States armed forces or were volunteering for military service.

Among American Jewish leaders it was readily recognized that one important project that must be carried out if war came would be that of compiling a record, as complete as possible, of the Jewish contribution to the war effort.

The Jewish Welfare Board had officially represented the coordinated interests of American Jews in serving the men in the Armed Forces in World War I and in the years of peace, and it was therefore the logical body to which this job in the approaching second world war might be entrusted. It was the JWB that by common consent undertook to set up an organization which would gather, assemble, classify and interpret the facts of Jewish participation in World War II.

That organization, when established, was named the Bureau of War Records of the National Jewish Welfare Board. It was launched on October 9, 1941, barely two months before Pearl Harbor. It was sponsored at the outset by 21 national Jewish organizations and ultimately by 38.

Representatives of the sponsoring organizations made up an Advisory Committee of the Bureau. Then a Technical Committee of eminent statisticians was named, to guide the Bureau in its processes and to review its findings. Chairman of both Committees was Dr. Louis I. Dublin, second vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and its chief statistician. A better choice to assure a sound and scientifically correct result could hardly have been made.

The Problem

The Bureau needed, first of all, to analyze the job that lay ahead of it, to assess the problems it would face.

The Technical Committee immediately entered on a preliminary inquiry into the nature and scope of the program before it. A conference with War and Navy Department officials soon disclosed that Jewish servicemen could not be identified as such by an examination of the official records. This outlined the first and major problem. The Bureau would have to work directly through the communities themselves, and would have to develop with them the ways of measuring the extent of Jewish participation.

It would have to start almost from scratch. There were, to begin with, no reliable figures as to the number of Jews in the United States, or even in the larger cities in which the greater part of American Jews live. All that made it clear that the Bureau would have to operate on a decentralized plan, relying on the local communities, with their own leaders and local devices, to gather the much-needed basic information, such as the number of Jews in the service from each community and what proportion they formed of the local Jewish population. Local communities meant the Jewish groups in the several states, in hundreds of counties and in over a thousand cities and towns.

The national office, located in New York, became the planning, promotional and supervisory organization. It set itself the tasks of:

1. Formulating procedures for organizing local war record committees.
2. Outlining techniques for gathering local information.
3. Establishing standard statistical and information forms—record cards, reports, letters of inquiry and the like.
4. Instructing local communities in setting up and operating local war records files.
5. Obtaining the authentications of all casualties (killed, wounded, missing, prisoners) and awards.
6. Obtaining regularly from local committees their statistics on the number in service and on casualties and awards.

Though it soon became evident that the Bureau of War Records could not hope to have a complete name-by-name record of Jews in the armed services, it urged every local community to keep a complete record of all such local servicemen and women—a task which was practicable except in New York and a few other large cities.

It was, all in all, a tremendous effort. More than 1200 separate communities in the United States were involved. Each had its own war records committee or, in the case of the smallest communities, its JWB correspondent, working to gather vital facts. They made up perhaps the greatest voluntary Jewish record gathering effort ever organized.

The Bureau began at once establishing rosters, as complete as possible, of the following: Jews who died in the service, the wounded, those captured by the enemy and those reported missing in action. These were the four official categories of casualties of the armed forces. As the war continued, the figures in each changed—and they were still changing, with new information continually coming in, up to the day this volume went to press.

The Bureau worked primarily from published government lists of casualties and of awards, but these carried no indication of religion. Names of servicemen and of their nearest kin gave the first indication of possible Jewish origin, but these had to be sent to the local communities for authentication of religious background. Often the family of the serviceman could not be found at the listed address, delaying the process of authentication. In this difficult job of authenticating cases, the Bureau received much help from the local committees which also furnished much information independently.

To fill in the picture of total Jewish participation in the armed services, the Bureau embarked on a series of special studies, of two types. 1. Population studies in various communities, to obtain analyses of sizable Jewish populations together with the numbers in the armed forces. 2. Studies of the contributions of special Jewish groups; namely, physicians, dentists, recent immigrants, farm families. It was also necessary to make an analysis of the distribution of Jews in uniform among the several branches of service.

The first of the population studies was made as early as August, 1942; most of them, however, were actually made in 1944 and 1945, when the greater part of the nation's armed forces were already mobilized; in all, twenty-six community studies were made. In most of these communities, these studies were inclusive of all Jews. In New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, which have a very large proportion of the country's Jewish population, the Bureau used scientific sampling procedures to arrive at its results. In all cases, what was sought was: The percentage of the community's Jewish population in the service, compared with the percentage of the total local population in the service; and the percentage of the Jewish draft-eligible men in service, men between the ages of 18 and 44, compared with the percentage of all draft eligibles in service. The results of these population studies are summarized in Table I. It should be emphasized that intercity comparisons cannot be made on the basis of this table because the studies were made at different times, and local conditions also affect the situation for particular cities.

Table I shows that in 25 of the 26 cities, the percentage of Jews in the service was higher than in the general population. In most of these cases, as well as in the single case where the Jewish proportion was lower, the margin of differences was too small to be of any significance, but in a few cases the difference was too large to be simply a matter of chance. What stands out as important is the general tendency shown by these figures.

In like manner when the proportion in service of the total draft reservoir is considered, the studies show that the percentage for the Jewish population was higher than for the general population in 23 of the 26 cities. Again, most of the differences are too small to warrant much emphasis, but the general tendency is again unmistakable that the Jewish participation in the armed forces was fully up to all expectations.

* Sampling Surveys

Although Jews were thus found to be in the armed services in greater proportions than was the case with the population as a whole, there need be no claim, and there is none, that that was because Jews were more patriotic than Americans in general or more alive to the issues involved in the war.

For one thing, the overwhelming majority of servicemen came into uniform by way of the Selective Service System, which picked civilians for military service solely on the basis of availability and physical and mental fitness.

If the percentage of Jews in service was higher than of Americans as a whole, these were some of the reasons:

1. Jews are largely city dwellers. The deferment rate was lower in urban than in rural areas. Hence urban areas contributed proportionately larger numbers, non-Jews as well as Jews, to the armed services.
2. Jewish men tend to marry later in life than non-Jews. Hence smaller numbers of Jews, in proportion, were subject to deferment because of dependency of wife and children.
3. Some studies showed that a larger proportion of Jews are in clerical and kindred occupations than is the case for the population as a whole—and few deferments for occupational reasons were made in these occupations.

On the basis of these population studies and other pertinent data, some of the statistical experts affiliated with the Bureau's Technical Committee made estimates from time to time as to the number of Jews who were in the armed forces during World War II. Their final estimate, as of January 1, 1946, placed the probable minimum number who had answered the call to service in the armed forces at 550,000. In the absence of any reliable and definite knowledge as to the total number of Jews in the country and the age and sex characteristics of the Jewish population, several types of estimates were used which all yielded a figure of this order. The experts concluded, therefore, that 550,000 was the most reasonable and valid figure.

Special Groups

Special studies were conducted, from time to time, and analyses made of the contribution of specific groups to the ranks of the armed forces: Jewish physicians, Jewish dentists, Jewish refugees (who came to this country in the 1930's) and Jewish farmers. Some interesting results were thus brought out.

Jewish Physicians: On the basis of the Bureau's findings, it is clear that the Jewish physicians and surgeons shared fully in the remarkable performance of American medicine in the war. Four studies were made to obtain information on the proportion of Jewish physicians who went into the service.

a. Two New York City boroughs, Brooklyn and the Bronx. In October, 1943. Of 7,404 doctors listed, the religion of 92 percent was known. Thirty-two percent of the Jewish physicians were in service; 27.5 percent of the non-Jewish group.

b. Reports from 22 cities, covering 3,050 physicians, of whom 20 percent were Jewish. Of the Jewish physicians, 44 percent were reported in the service. Of the non-Jewish group, 25 percent.

c. New York State Survey. This covered male physicians under 45 years of age. Within New York City: Jewish physicians in the service, 54 percent; non-Jewish physicians in the service, 54 percent. Up-State New York: Jewish physicians (including Jewish refugees) in service, 54 percent; non-Jewish physicians in service, 57 percent. Since refugee physicians practicing in the state were not permitted to join the armed forces as medical officers, inclusion of the refugees in the survey reduced the percentage of Jewish physicians in the service. With the refugees excluded, the proportion of Jewish physicians from upstate New York in the service was 57 percent, or the same as that of the non-Jewish group.

d. New Jersey survey of male physicians under 45 years of age. Jewish physicians in service, 63 percent. Non-Jewish physicians in service, 51 percent.

Jewish Dentists: Two studies were made in 1945. In New York City, the survey covered 8,192 dentists. For 90 percent the religion was ascertained. Of the Jewish dentists, 29.5 percent were in the service. Of non-Jewish dentists, 23.5 percent.

In upstate New York, of 1,791 dentists whose religion was ascertained, 34 percent of the Jewish dentists and 17.3 percent of the non-Jewish group were in the service.

Jewish Refugees: A survey was made early in 1945 in cooperation with the National Refugee Service (which subsequently became the United Service for New Americans, Inc.). Of 3,593 refugees surveyed, 10 percent had entered the service. Of the total population at that time, 8.9 percent was in the service.

Jewish Farmers: In cooperation with the Jewish Agricultural Society, the Bureau of War Records in November, 1944, selected three farm areas for a farm-to-farm canvass. The areas, in Connecticut, Michigan and New Jersey, were believed to include about 15 percent of all Jewish families living on the land.

The survey covered in all 1,071 Jewish persons, of whom 80 were found to be in service, or 7.5 percent. At the same time, about 8.5 percent of the total population of the United States had entered the service. However, rural representation in the services was notably lower than urban because of occupational deferments of farmers. The most conservative estimate indicates that about 7.7 percent of the U. S. farm population entered the service up to the date of the survey.

Where They Served

Except for the volunteer units, the wishes of the individual servicemen played a very minor role in a man's branch of service and of the specific duties he performed. The Army and Navy—and Coast Guard and Marines—assigned their men where needed and where they would be used most effectively. Voluntary enlistments were discouraged early in the war and after a while altogether abolished.

Branch of service statistics for Jews are based on an analysis of the war records of 403 communities in the United States. A total of 122,272 Jewish men, or about 22% of all Jewish men in service, were covered in the survey.

Table II discloses that there were fewer Jewish men in the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps than in the Army, in proportion to the total numbers in these forces. In view of the lack of tradition of Navy service among Jewish men, this was to be expected. Notable, however, was the fact that as much as 19 percent of Jewish fighting men—about 100,000 in all—did enter these services.

Of the overwhelming majority who served in the Army, a notably large number of Jewish men became Air Force fliers —4.7 percent of the total. Army Air Force flying personnel, along with the Marines and the Paratroops formed the major combat volunteer services—and the Jewish men, in these three services combined, made up an estimated 3.5 percent of all men in these services. This is approximately the proportion of the Jewish contribution to all servicemen. Jewish officers were about 20 percent of all Jewish men in uniform.

Casualties, Awards

At the time of writing, the Bureau of War Records had a roster of more than 35,000 Jewish casualties of World War II. Included were: 10,500 Jewish war dead, 8,000 of whom were killed in action; 18,000 wounded; 3,000 missing in action; 3,600 taken prisoners by the enemy.

		Miscellaneous Awards*	8,508
		Total	61,448

Note—These statistics represent the number of casualties and awards, not the number of men involved. Awards of oak leaf clusters (Army) and gold stars (Navy) are included as additional awards of the same medal. Number of Jewish men receiving awards: 36,352.

* Principally, Presidential Unit Citations, Letters of Commendation and awards by foreign governments.

The Bureau's files also contain records of just under 27,000 awards—exclusive of the Purple Heart, foreign awards and commendations and unit citations. All men killed in action or wounded in action were automatically granted the Purple Heart, but the Bureau specifically recorded only those Purple Hearts which the servicemen's families reported as having been received. In Table III, the number of Purple Hearts awarded Jewish servicemen was estimated on the basis of casualty statistics.

Some 20,000 of the 27,000 listed awards were granted for valor in combat (for example, the Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Cross, the Navy Cross). Six thousand were Bronze Stars, earned either in action or for service, and 643 were awards for meritorious service (i.e., Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit) or for heroism not connected with combat (as the Soldier's Medal).

Impressive as these figures are, they are far from complete. As indicated earlier, the names of the men who suffered casualties or received awards were, for the most part, derived originally from official government releases which themselves varied in adequacy, being most complete in the case of those killed in action and least complete with respect to awards. In addition, the Bureau of War Records and its local committees were unable to authenticate the names of all the Jews who appeared in these lists. It is probable, therefore, that the count of the number of Jews killed in action, for which the record is fullest, is 15 percent to 20 percent less than the actual number and that the numbers listed for non-combat deaths and awards is only about half the true number.

This means that there were hundreds of Jewish war dead and thousands of the wounded or decorated heroes whose names do not appear in the lists assembled by the Bureau of War Records.

Briefly this is the story. It is anticipated that, in the near future, it will be possible to publish, in far greater detail, the statistical studies and the findings summarized in this preface.

Introduction to Honor Roll

The pages that follow contain the names of service men and women of Jewish faith who died in their country's service, who were wounded in action or who have won awards for outstanding acts of heroism in World War II.

This Honor Roll includes only those who are definitely known to be Jewish, as a result of careful authentication by the Bureau of War Records of the National Jewish Welfare Board and local war records committees. This Honor Roll is far from complete. Thousands of names belong on it of Jewish service men and women who, for various reasons, were not identified. Readers who know of such men and women are urged to submit names and the facts. It is planned in time to issue a further list as a supplement to this volume and its Roll of Honor.
