IT IS APPROPRIATE that, on the occasion of the current celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the first settlement of Jews in what is now the United States of America, this book, the first biographical dictionary of world Jewry, should be dedicated to the Jewish Community of the United States which, since its earliest beginnings, has preserved its ties with its sister communities all over the world, has sprung to their defense against prejudice and persecution, has helped them to recover from the ravages of two world wars, has performed a historic role in the upbuilding and rebirth of independent Israel, and has contributed to the promotion of human welfare in general, in harmony with the teachings and ideals of Judaism.

PREFACE

THE CORDIAL RESPONSE of the leadership of the Jewish communities and organizations and their active cooperation, as well as the readiness with which thousands of individuals in many lands responded to our requests for information are concrete evidences of the need for, and the widespread interest in, such a work as this.

Because the marvels of swift communication of our time have brought all the peoples of the world much closer together than ever before, cooperation between groups in various countries, in causes of common concern, has greatly increased.

Other factors, more directly and specifically accounting for a notable increase in mutual understanding between, and common effort among, Jews have been the tragic experiences of Jews on the European continent during the Hitler-Mussolini era, resulting in the movement of a large body of Jews into Israel and the New World and, at the same time, the loss of some six millions to the Nazi Moloch. These circumstances contributed to a closing of ranks by Jews all over the world and increased the sense of community of interest and of fate.

But, undoubtedly, the most important stimulus to closer relations between Jewish communities has been the establishment of the independent State of Israel. This event created a new focus of interest and concern on the part of Jews everywhere, has added new strands to the bonds of sympathy, and aroused a greater desire among many Jews in all lands to know more about their brethren everywhere.

We believe that it is these and other collateral factors that have created a mood favorable to the production of a work like the present, and that they made it far less difficult than it would have been only a few years ago.

It is hardly necessary for the editors to observe that the present work represents a great deal of competent and conscientious effort on the part of the editorial staff, with the cooperation of many individuals, some of whom are listed elsewhere, who contributed valuable information and suggestions and whose help is gratefully acknowledged. The editors are convinced, however, that the work would not have been done with the same industry, devotion and enthusiasm, nor the results as satisfactory as they are, had it not been for the moral support and encouragement of the Jewish community as represented by the leaders who accepted our invitation to serve as members of our Editorial Board, Advisory Council, Technical Advisory Committee, and International Publication Committee. The membership of these groups is given elsewhere in this volume.

These consultative bodies were set up because the sponsors of the project realize that they have a responsibility to the community and should give its representatives an opportunity to be kept informed of the progress of the book and to participate in the formulation of important policies. To all these men and women who contributed to the prestige and public acceptance of our undertaking and assisted us with advice, we extend the sincere expression of our wholehearted gratitude. We hope that the quality of the results, to the achievement of which they made so vital a contribution, will give them the satisfaction of having rightfully placed their trust and confidence.

Several members of these committees and other persons are deserving of a special expression of thanks for their outstanding services to this project. These include Dr. Joshua Bloch, chief of the Jewish Division of the New York Public Library, who gave us valuable advice, general as well as technical; Dr. Harry Cohen, New York City, distinguished surgeon, who served ably as the chairman of our international medical committee; Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, whose active participation helped to secure the cooperation of leaders in many countries; Miss Fanny Goldstein, librarian of the West End Branch of the Boston Public Library, whose expert advice, in matters bibliographical and biographical, was very helpful; Dr. Maurice Jacobs, publisher of Philadelphia, who gave us the benefit of his long experience in the field of Jewish books; Rabbi I. Edward Kiev, librarian of the Jewish Institute of Religion, New York, who patiently and ably responded to many questions regarding books and bookmen; Philip M. Klutznick, international president of B'nai B'rith, who followed the progress of our work with close interest and could always be relied upon for active cooperation; Daniel I. McNamara, director of public relations of ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers) and editor of ASCAP Biographical Dictionary, who cheerfully placed at our disposal the biographical records of the membership of that organization and gave us other important assistance; Dr. Abraham Mibashan of Buenos Aires, Argentina, editor of Eretz Israel, a Spanish-language periodical, and director of the newly established Editorial Candelabro, a Jewish publication enterprise, who supplied us with much of the biographical data of individuals in many of the South American countries; Dr. Robert R. Nathan, economist of New York and Washington, who gave us much helpful advice and assistance; and Zachariah Shuster, director of the European office, in Paris, of the American Jewish Committee, whose help in connection with Western Europe was invaluable.

Special thanks are due also to Dr. Albert Vajo, President, and Solomon Kalderon, Secretary, of the Federation of Jewish communities of Yugoslavia, who provided us with valuable biographical information on notable Jews in that country.

The publishers and the editors wish to express their grateful appreciation also for the valuable suggestions made by Messrs. J. Randall Williams, 3rd, vice-president, and William Clifford, associate editor, of the Macmillan Company, and by Lewis Miller, sales manager, Robert K. Haas, vice-president, and Donald Klopfer, secretary-treasurer of Random House.

The editors desire to express their grateful appreciation of the devotion and industry of the large editorial staff, whose members are listed elsewhere, and especially of the patient, tireless and loyal services of Mrs. Esther G. Karpman, our Managing Editor, who originated the procedures for processing the biographical data, supervised the editorial staff, prepared "copy" for the printer, and performed many other vital tasks. Special thanks are due also to Mr. Herman Greenbaum, vice-president of Monde Publishers, Inc., for valuable administrative assistance.

We express our thanks also to Mr. Samuel R. Schneider, attorney-at-law, former president, National College Men's Progressive League, for significant legal advice and counsel.

We gratefully acknowledge the assistance we received from Messrs. Arthur I. and Sidney V. LeVine, president and vice president respectively of the Ad Press, Ltd., the printers of this work, for the skill and precision they devoted to its production and for their friendliness and patience, so essential to the success of a pioneer project such as ours. Mr. Arthur I. LeVine also performed a valuable service when, during a recent trip to England, he voluntarily investigated various channels for the distribution of our book in the United Kingdom. Grateful acknowledgment is cheerfully made also to Mr. George Salter, the talented designer of the volume, and to Mr. Joseph M. Bernstein, who performed the exacting task of reading proofs with great skill and understanding.

Although over two and one-half years of conscientious and dedicated effort on the part of many collaborators have been devoted to the task of producing this comprehensive book, yet the editors readily and humbly admit that, despite their best efforts to produce an accurate work, it may have many faults of both omission and commission. Many of these faults would probably have been avoided or corrected if more time had been given to the various phases of the project, but the editors were confronted with the same dilemma as faces the compilers of all books on current events, namely, the production of a fairly up-to-date, albeit imperfect, book, or of one with fewer faults but with much obsolete information. The editors chose the former course in the hope that, bearing in mind that this book is the first of its kind to attempt world-wide coverage, the public would be lenient in its judgment and would receive the results of our labor so favorably as to encourage us to produce supplements, revised and improved editions, and to make the compilation of biographical material a continuing activity. Toward this end we shall welcome criticisms, both favorable and adverse, as well as corrections. At the same time, it is our hope that the result of our painstaking efforts is such as to entitle us to the continuation of the approbation and esteem of our many friends and well-wishers.

INTRODUCTION

BECAUSE IT IS THE FIRST time in history that a collection of biographies of important Jews in many lands, based on material supplied by them, has been published, the editors consider it appropriate to give a brief statement of their objectives and the methods employed to attain them, a recital of some of the problems encountered and a few observations of a technical nature.

The present work was conceived by the publishers of the Encyclopedia Hebraica, a general encyclopedia in the Hebrew language, now being published in Jerusalem, and a group of American Jews, headed by Mr. Itzhak J. Carmin. Finding it impossible to carry on the necessary correspondence from Israel, the publishers of the Encyclopedia Hebraica turned over the project to the editors in New York City who incorporated it under the name of Monde Publishers, Inc. with headquarters in New York City. It was agreed that, under the supervision of Mr. Julian L. Meltzer, a well-known newspaper correspondent, the publishers of the encyclopedia would compile biographical sketches of notable Jews in the Middle East and in Western Europe, and that these sketches would be turned over, in due course, to the American publishers. The actual work of compilation of material was begun in Israel and in Europe at the end of 1951, and in the Western Hemisphere at the beginning of 1952.

In order to assure adequate coverage of distinguished Jews in Latin American countries, we invited Dr. Abraham Mibashan of Buenos Aires, Argentina, to act as representative of our Editorial Board. Dr. Mibashan is the editor of the Spanish-language weekly, Eretz Israel, and director of Editorial Candelabro, a new Jewish publication enterprise, and an important figure in Jewish communal activities. Dr. Mibashan compiled the basic data for almost all the biographies in Argentina and many in other Latin American countries. Others were obtained as a result of direct communication with persons whose names were suggested by Jewish organizations in the United States, which maintain close contact with communities in other countries.

From Canada, lists of individuals deemed worthy of consideration for the inclusion of their biographies, were obtained from the Canadian Jewish Congress and the Zionist Organization of Canada. The Board of Jewish Deputies in Johannesburg contributed lists for the Union of South Africa, and lists from the North African countries, Australia, New Zealand, and the Far East were supplied by counterpart organizations in those countries. Especially noteworthy was the cooperation of Chief Rabbi Rafael D. Saban of Turkey who took the trouble of having our questionnaires translated into French, sending them to individuals selected by him, collecting the filled-in forms and sending them to us.

In the United States lists of "nominees" were generously contributed by hundreds of communal organizations, national and regional as well as local, representative of all shades of Jewish opinion. (A list of the more important of these cooperating organizations is included in this volume.) Of special significance was the active cooperation of Jewish community councils, federations and welfare funds, and editors of English-Jewish periodicals. Other sources found helpful were the membership lists of business, professional and cultural associations, supplied to us by their executive officers. Directories of government officials were also carefully examined. In addition, a number of individuals volunteered their services to insure adequate coverage of professions and occupations regarding which these persons possessed expert knowledge. Special effort was made in the fields of fine arts, labor, and Yiddish literature in America.

All this and additional research work and collaboration were essential to the achievement of our aim,—the production of an original, comprehensive, objective and authoritative source of information about Jewish men and women who formerly made, or are now making, significant contributions to the world's civilization and culture, including the important field of Jewish communal life. Although our book is, in a sense, a roll of honor, yet the aim chiefly in our minds was a reliable compendium of facts, a standard reference work which will be found useful by many individuals and groups, including persons wishing to obtain detailed information about the careers of prominent personalities; biographees who are interested in learning more about others active in the same field; Jewish organizations desirous of having fuller biographical data about their leading members; the editors of general as well as Jewish newspapers and other periodicals who will find in the biographies useful supplementary information regarding individuals in their news columns; journalists who will find, in the contents of this book, suggestions and materials for feature newspaper and magazine articles; teachers in Jewish week-day and Sunday schools who may find it instructive in teaching advanced pupils about Jewish community life and its leaders; rabbis who may have occasion, in sermons or other public addresses, to refer to the careers of specific personalities; civic and cultural organizations, both Jewish and non-sectarian, which may discover, upon an examination of these pages, persons who, by reason of their backgrounds and interests, may constitute valuable fellow-workers for their causes and objectives; and other categories of individuals and groups. The fact that fully half of the biographies in the book are of American Jews should make it especially welcome to the shelves of public, school, college and newspaper, as well as private, libraries in this country.

The task of the editors was considerably lightened by the large affirmative response to their request for biographical data from the persons whose names had been suggested by cooperating organizations and individuals or otherwise obtained.

A vital question on which our advisory committees were polled was that involving the definition of the term "Jew." This question was brought up by several of our correspondents. In one instance, an individual informed us that, although one of his parents was a Jew and he himself is a member of a Christian denomination, he, nevertheless, has no objection to the inclusion of his biography. In another case, an individual informed us that, though born a Jew, he had been baptized. In another case, the correspondent informed us that, though born a Jew, he had severed all religious and cultural bonds with the Jewish people at an early age.

It seemed to the editors that neither Jewish birth nor the willingness to be included in a roster of Jews should by itself make an individual eligible for the inclusion of his biography in this book. Our advisers agreed with this conclusion and with the general principle that self-identification as a Jew, as evidenced by participation in some phase of Jewish life, should be a basic requirement for the inclusion of a person's biography.

Another group of biographies which required special handling comprised those of persons who died after they were selected for the inclusion of their life records. It was evident to the editors that the sketches of such individuals should be included with the date of death in each case. An effort was made to include also sketches of other important individuals who died during the preparation of this volume, that is, since the middle of 1952. In achieving these aims, the editors were fortunate in securing permission to use the necrology lists in the American Jewish Year Book, from the publishers, the American Jewish Committee and the Jewish Publication Society of America.

It is extremely difficult to define the criteria by which the editors were guided in deciding the eligibility of the "candidates." It should be stated, at the outset, that, with the full concurrence of the publishers, the editors adhered strictly to a policy of full independence. The selection of biographies to be included was based exclusively on the record of achievement of each individual. In our correspondence and other contacts with persons under consideration for the inclusion of their biographies, we always made it quite clear that no obligation was incurred by those who supplied biographical data and that no payment or subscription for a copy of the book was necessary for the inclusion of one's biography.

Except for agreement as to all high officials in all branches of government, including armed forces, and all academicians, with the rank of assistant professor or higher, there were no categories whose members were automatically admitted. It being impossible to set up hard and fast criteria, the selection was perforce subjective to some extent, but every effort was made by the editors to be as objective as possible. It may be said that each potential biographee was considered on his or her individual merits. The editors believed that recognition by one's colleagues or co-professionals, not popularity alone, are adequate qualification for selection. In the selecting process, we bore in mind that greatness is relative, that a very small number of Jews are world-renowned, and that it would be incorrect to apply the same criteria to all countries or to all parts of the same country.

In this connection, persons consulting this book need hardly be reminded that the space given to a biography is no indication of the editors' opinion of the relative importance of the individual described. The length of the sketches depends entirely on the volume of the data supplied by each subject. Of course, the editors deleted such material as they deemed unsuitable for inclusion, but they made no effort to allot space in accordance with their appraisal of the relative importance of the "biographees."

Another fact that should be borne in mind is that the statements appearing in the biographies are given as submitted by the subjects.

A total of 12,582 persons supplied us with filled-in questionnaires. These were carefully reviewed by the editors and their assistants. A second screening was made after biographical sketches, based on the questionnaires, were drafted.

The number of biographies presented in this volume is 10,700. Of these, over one-half are of persons in the United States. Other countries represented in this volume by a considerable number of biographies are: Argentina, Australia, Canada, France, Ireland, Israel, Mexico, South Africa, United Kingdom. Especially interesting is the fact that we received biographical data from persons in far distant lands, including: Aden, Alaska, Dutch West Indies, Egypt, Ethiopia, Hawaii, Hong Kong, Indonesia, India, Japan, Lebanon, Syria, and Yugoslavia.

It will be noted that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and its satellites (Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Bulgaria and Albania) are not represented by biographies. It was with keen regret that the editors reached the decision not to include biographies of Jews in these countries. Correspondence with individuals in these countries is known to be not only difficult, but also likely to be dangerous for the recipients. It was urged by some of our correspondents that at least references to Jews, known to have been active in Jewish communal life and believed to be alive in these countries, should be included, but others pointed out that such references would be too fragmentary to have any practical value and that even a mere reference to such individuals could be ground for suspicion that they were in communication, presumably unlawful, with nationals of a foreign power. The editors were persuaded, that so long as there is any possibility that even the mere listing of names might prove harmful to innocent persons, it was best to omit all references of this kind.

As has already been stated, the drafts of the biographies of some of the individuals in Israel, in Great Britain, and in some other Western European countries were supplied by an editorial staff engaged by the publishers of Encyclopedia Hebraica, Jerusalem, in accordance with the arrangement described earlier. However, because of lack of completeness and differences of style, these biographies required considerable revision and our editorial staff found it necessary to supplement the data given with additional relevant facts and also to secure biographical data from additional individuals.

The material from Israel confronted the editors with a special problem because of the frequent use of Hebrew in the names of organizations and in titles of books, plays, etc. After careful consideration the editors decided that, in order to facilitate reference to these biographies by persons without a knowledge of the Hebrew language, the names and titles referred to should be translated into English, except when the names or titles are of original works of fiction or they are so widely known as not to require translation. This procedure was, we believe, especially important in dealing with the titles of books translated from English into Hebrew and those of scientific works and of books on other universal subjects. In a limited number of cases where Hebrew terms were transliterated into Latin characters, the editors followed the "Plan of Transliteration from Hebrew into English for General Use," recommended by a committee comprising the heads of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, the Hebrew Union College, the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the National Council for Jewish Education. The text of this plan is given in another place in this volume.

A few brief observations, regarding the pattern or format we have followed in presenting biographical data, may be in order here. After the name of each subject, appears that of the country of his permanent residence, which is not always the land of his citizenship. This is followed by the profession or occupational group to which the individual belongs, after which come what may be termed "vital statistics" (date, place of birth, marriage, children, education, etc.). These facts are followed by information about the individual's present position which is, in turn, followed by an outline of his career, in chronological sequence from its beginning. Then follow a list of organizational affiliations, another of literary or artistic works, and a third of clubs to which the individual belongs. In the spelling of names of cities and other places in non-English-speaking countries, standard English spelling was used whenever available.

The list of abbreviations in this book is, in important respects, an unusual one, because the volume contains biographies of Jews only, necessitating the inclusion of many special scholastic degrees and organizational affiliations, and also because of the international scope of the contents.

Besides the biographies, this volume contains two additional features, namely, a directory of important communal organizations and another of Jewish periodicals in all countries. The directory of organizations, besides facilitating correspondence, is to give a general idea of the interests and activities of each community. The directory of periodicals will help those individuals who may desire to obtain further information about Jewish life in any particular country. It is hoped that residents of the United States may learn, from these directories, interesting facts about Jewish communal life in other countries, and that readers in other lands will find the directories helpful in respect of the United States. The organization directory was prepared by Mr. Morris Fine, editor of The American Jewish Year Book, to whom we express our thanks.

As was stated in the Preface, the editors invite criticism, adverse as well as favorable, and will be thankful to those readers who contribute suggestions and corrections.

NOTE ON TRANSLITERATION FROM HEBREW INTO ENGLISH.

In transliterating from Hebrew into English characters, the editors followed the plan recommended in 1936 by representatives of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, the Hebrew Union College, the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the National Council for Jewish Education. This plan, which was published in Jewish Education, Vol. 8, No. 2, April-June 1936, page 89, recommends that the equivalence indicated below be used for Hebrew characters, vowels, etc.

Consonants

ט	ח	ז	ו	ה*	ד	ג	ב	בּ
t	h	z	v	h	d	g	b	b
פ	ס	נ	מ	ל	כ	פּ	י
p	s	n	m	l	kh	k	y
ת	תּ	שׁ	שׂ	ר	ק	צ	פ
t	t	s	sh	r	k	z	f

א and ע are to be represented by their vowels only.

Vowels

Long and short vowels are not to be differentiated. Hatafim are to be represented by the value of the corresponding full vowel.

ָ	ַ	ֲ	= a
ֻ	ּ		= u
ִ	ּ		= i

Sheva

Sheva Quiescent is not to be represented.

Sheva Mobile is to be represented by e.

Dagesh

Dagesh Lene is to be represented as shown in transliteration of consonants.

Dagesh Forte is to be represented by doubling the letter, except in the case of sh.

Definite Article and Prepositions

The article is to be represented by h with the vowel called for by grammatical rules, to be followed by a hyphen.

The prepositions בּ, כ, ל, מ, are to be represented in a similar manner.

Common Biblical Names and Terms

For common Biblical names, the transliteration of the Jewish Publication Society translation of the Holy Scriptures is to be followed. Similarly, for ordinary non-scientific purposes the spelling of common names and terms which has gained currency is to be used. Whenever it is desired, for some special reason, to emphasize the exact Hebrew spelling or pronunciation, the rules for transliteration should be used.

*In all positions.
