WHO'S WHO IN WORLD JEWRY

PREFACE

THE WIDE ACCEPTANCE given to the original edition of Who's Who in World Jewry, published in 1955, as evidenced by the total distribution of that edition within less than two years of its appearance, and the realization that the biographies of some persons eligible for inclusion may have been omitted, and that, since then, a considerable number of younger Jewish personalities have achieved prominence and distinction in various fields of activity, motivated the Editors and sponsors of the original edition to produce the present volume. The Editors were encouraged to undertake the compilation of the present new edition by the assurances of the continued approval and cooperation of the leaders of the many important Jewish community organizations in the United States and abroad, who had contributed so signally to the success of the first volume.

The present work, like its predecessor, represents a great deal of competent and conscientious effort on the part of the editorial staff, with the cooperation of many individuals, some of whom are listed elsewhere, who contributed valuable information and suggestions and whose help is gratefully acknowledged. The Editors are convinced, however, that the work would not have been done with the same industry, devotion and enthusiasm, nor the results as satisfactory as they are, had it not been for the moral support and encouragement of the Jewish community as represented by the leaders who accepted the invitation to serve as members of our Editorial Board, Advisory Council, International Publication Committee, and Israel Honorary Committee.

These consultative bodies were set up because the sponsors of the project realize that they have a responsibility to the community and should give its representatives an opportunity to be kept informed of the progress of the work and to participate in the formulation of important policies. To all these men and women who contributed to the prestige and public acceptance of our undertaking and assisted us with advice, we extend the sincere expression of our wholehearted gratitude. We hope that the quality of the results, to the achievement of which they made so vital a contribution, will give them the satisfaction of having rightfully placed their trust and confidence.

Several members of these committees and other persons are deserving of a special expression of thanks for their outstanding services to this project. These include Giulio Anau, secretary of the Union of the Jewish Communities of Italy, Rome; Murray Frank, journalist, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Louis Rosenberg, research director, Canadian Jewish Congress, Montreal; Dr. Benjamin Sagalowitz, head, press department, Union of Swiss Jewish Communities, Zurich; Zachariah Shuster, director of the European office, in Paris, of the American Jewish Committee; Dr. Arieh Tartakower, chairman, Israel section, World Jewish Congress, Jerusalem;

the late Dr. Albert Vajs, president of the Federation of Jewish Communities in Yugoslavia, and David Levi, Federation secretary, Zagreb; Eugene Weill, secretary general, Alliance Israelite Universelle, Paris; Dr. Vojtech B. Winterstein, executive director, Confederation of Jewish Communities of Brazil, Rio de Janeiro. Thanks to the cooperation of Jewish organizations, with world-wide affiliations, such as the World Zionist Organization, the World Jewish Congress, B'nai B'rith, the American Jewish Committee, ORT, Alliance Israelite Universelle and others, we received lists from many countries. Of exceptional value was the assistance furnished by several departments of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, Jerusalem, and by many of its consular representatives who supplied us with lists of notable individuals in Asia, Africa and Latin America. The source of the biographies from England and Ireland was the Jewish Chronicle, London.

As was to be expected, the contents of the present volume differ considerably from those of the first edition. The subjects included in the 1955 edition were given an opportunity to revise and bring up to date their biographies. Death has taken away many, who, only ten years ago, stood in the forefront of religion, scholarship, the arts and sciences, civic and communal endeavor, industry, commerce and government. On the other hand, many new leaders in these fields earned the right of inclusion in Who's Who in World Jewry. Space was, therefore, provided for the biographies of a large number of additional individuals. Furthermore, the fact that besides the New York headquarters, which specialized in the compilation of biographies of eligible persons in the United States and Canada, an office was maintained in Tel Aviv, Israel, which specialized in gathering data about individuals in the Eastern Hemisphere and in Latin America, resulted in much better coverage of these parts of the world.

The Editors believe that it is important to point out that, as was the case with the first edition, the sketches in the present volume are based on data supplied by the individuals and have been approved by them. An energetic effort has been made to assure the inclusion of biographies of all individuals who, in the judgment of the editors, are eligible. However, a number of such individuals have failed to respond to repeated requests for their biographical data. This fact explains to a large extent, the absence of biographies of persons who may be regarded as deserving of the inclusion of their life records in this volume.

The Editors desire to express their grateful appreciation of the devotion and industry of the large editorial staff, whose members are listed elsewhere, and especially of the patient, tireless and loyal services of Mrs. Esther G. Karpman, our Managing Editor, who originated the procedures for processing the biographical data, supervised the editorial staff, prepared "copy" for the printer, and performed many other vital tasks. The achievements of the New York office would hardly have been possible without the skilled and efficient services of Mrs. Alice D. Bronson. We also gratefully acknowledge the valuable services rendered in Israel by Mrs. Yetta Gertler, Mrs. Rivka Kovnator-Bentor, and Mr. Moshe Kiselstein. The Editors also wish to express their warm thanks to Mr. C. Woodruff Starkweather, who performed the exacting task of reading proofs.

Preface

Although over three years of conscientious and dedicated effort on the part of many collaborators have been devoted to the task of producing this biographical dictionary, yet the Editors readily and humbly admit that, despite their best efforts to produce an accurate and comprehensive work, it may have faults of both omission and commission. Therefore, the Editors will welcome criticisms, as well as corrections. At the same time, it is our hope that the result of our painstaking efforts is such as to entitle us to the continuation of the approbation and moral support of our many friends and well-wishers.

FOREWORD

by DR. ISRAEL GOLDSTEIN

Chairman, International Publication Committee

ONE OF THE GRATIFYING developments in contemporary Jewish life has been the growing sense of Jewish identity in countries where the favorable environmental conditions might have been expected to have had the opposite effect. This phenomenon no doubt, was due in large part to the shock impacted by the Nazi era. Even more significant has been the exhilarating impact of the creation of the Jewish State, Medinat Israel.

The growing sense of Jewish identity has reflected itself in many ways, great and small. Local Jewish institutions, religious and secular, philanthropic and social, have grown apace. If the dimension of depth has left much to be desired, the number and the scope have mounted. At the same time that there has been an increasing self-awareness which has also been expressed in sociological and historic studies of Jewish communities in cities and regions, the bonds between Jewish communities in different parts of the world have grown both in scope and in depth on local as well as national levels. In sum, Jews have developed a serious interest in knowing and caring more and more about one another across the geographical boundaries which divide them.

Side by side with this development, there has been a growing interest in Jews by their non-Jewish neighbors, an interest motivated by neighborly interest and curiosity together with a genuine desire to better understand the composition of an important component in the social, economic, political, philanthropic, religious, cultural and artistic life of the general community.

Within this general context is to be viewed the usefulness of a publication such as "Who's Who in World Jewry." The need for a new edition of "Who's Who in World Jewry" was amply demonstrated by the success of the first edition nearly ten years ago. It has been found to be a useful reference volume for rabbis and laymen, communal institutions, national and international bodies, both Jewish and general, and for all students of contemporary Jewish history.

The last decade has been an important one in Jewish life. It has been a decade of consolidation for the new State of Israel. For most of the Jewish communities in the free world, it has been a decade punctuated on the whole by economic and political progress, and by a growing sense of Jewish identity and solidarity. But it has also been fraught with new problems and challenges.

This eventful decade has seen changes in Jewish leadership, due to death and retirement. It has brought to the fore numbers of Jewish leaders in all fields of endeavor, and in some communities a new type of leadership. Out of this decade have emerged new Jewish stars in the financial, industrial, literary and artistic spheres.

Students, professional groups and laymen should be knowledgeable about all of these new developments as reflected in new names and biographies, as well as in the names of those who have continued from the previous decade. While there have been a few similar compilations in the United States, Great Britain and one or two other countries, yet "Who's Who in World Jewry" is distinguished by its world-wide comprehensiveness and thoroughness. It has gathered information wherever it was available and accessible. Unfortunately, a substantial part of the Jewish people is living in lands which are not accessible and where the information, therefore, is scant or altogether unavailable.

Edited by the same able team of Harry Schneiderman and I. J. Carmin Karpman who were responsible for the first edition, the new edition of "Who's Who in World Jewry" deserves to be eagerly welcomed and extensively used.

INTRODUCTION

WHO'S WHO IN WORLD JEWRY was intended since its inception to fill the need of a standard work of contemporary biographical reference. The first edition, published in 1955 has earned wide acclaim as an authoritative historical record of notable Jews, who have made or are making significant contributions to humanity and to Jewish life.

The methods and procedures used in compiling the present volume were based on the experience obtained in the creation of the original edition. Executive officers of Jewish and civic organizations in the various countries were requested to supply lists of individuals in these lands. Upon receipt of such lists our editorial staffs in New York City and in Tel Aviv, Israel, respectively solicited biographical data from the individuals listed. On the basis of the data supplied, the editors selected those individuals who, in their judgment, were eligible for inclusion of their biographies in the new edition. Each of these persons was sent, for his or her approval, a biographical sketch prepared for publication in this edition.

In the United States lists of "nominees" were generously contributed by hundreds of communal organizations, national and regional as well as local, representing all shades of Jewish opinion. (A list of the more important of these cooperating organizations is included in this volume.) Of special significance was the active cooperation of Jewish community councils, federations and welfare funds, and editors of English-Jewish periodicals. Other sources that were helpful were the membership lists of business, professional and cultural associations. In addition, a number of individuals volunteered their services to insure adequate coverage of professions and occupations regarding which these persons possessed expert knowledge.

Although Who's Who in World Jewry is, in a sense, a roll of honor, yet the aim chiefly in our minds was a reliable compendium of facts, a standard reference work which will be found useful by many individuals and groups, including persons wishing to obtain detailed information about the careers of prominent personalities; Jewish organizations desirous of having fuller biographical data about their leading members; the editors of general as well as Jewish newspapers and other periodicals who will find in the biographies useful supplementary information regarding individuals in their news columns; journalists who will find material for feature newspaper and magazine articles; teachers who may find it instructive in teaching advanced pupils about Jewish community life and its leaders; rabbis who may have occasion, in sermons or other public addresses, to refer to the careers of specific personalities; civic and cultural organizations, both Jewish and non-sectarian, which may discover, upon an examination of these pages, persons who, by reason of their backgrounds and interests, may constitute valuable fellow-workers for their causes and objectives; and other categories of individuals and groups.

The task of the Editors was considerably lightened by the large affirmative response to their request for biographical data from the persons whose names had been suggested by cooperating organizations and individuals or otherwise obtained.

A vital question on which our advisory committees were polled was that involving the definition of the term "Jew." As stated in the first edition, the editors believed that neither Jewish birth nor the willingness to be included in a roster of Jews should by itself make an individual eligible for the inclusion in this book. Our advisors agreed with this conclusion and with the general principle that self-identification as Jew should be a basic requirement for the inclusion of a person's biography.

In deciding the eligibility of the "candidates," the Editors were guided by the criteria established in the preparation of the first edition of Who's Who in World Jewry. With the full concurrence of the publishers, the Editors adhered strictly to a policy of full independence. The selection of biographies to be included was based exclusively on the record of achievement of each individual. In our correspondence and other contacts with persons under consideration for the inclusion of their biographies, we always made it quite clear that no obligation was incurred by those who supplied biographical data and that no payment or subscription for a copy of the book was necessary for or could secure the inclusion of one's biography.

Except for agreement as to all high officials in all branches of government, including armed forces, and all academicians, with the rank of assistant professor or higher, there were no categories whose members were automatically admitted. It being impossible to set up hard and fast criteria, the selection was perforce subjective to some extent, but every effort was made by the Editors to be as objective as possible. It may be said that each potential biographee was considered on his or her individual merits, and that recognition by one's colleagues or co-professionals, not popularity alone, was adequate qualification for selection. In the selecting process, we bore in mind that greatness is relative, that a limited number of Jews are world-renowned, and that it would be incorrect to apply the same criteria to all countries or to all parts of the same country.

In this connection, persons consulting this book need hardly be reminded that the space given to a biography is no indication of the Editors' opinion of the relative importance of the individual described. The length of the sketches depended on the volume of the data supplied by each subject. Of course, the Editors deleted such material as they deemed unsuitable for inclusion, but made no effort to allot space in accordance with their appraisal of the relative importance of the "biographies." Another fact that should be borne in mind is that the statements appearing in the biographies are given as submitted by the subjects.

Introduction

The number of biographies in this volume is about 11,000. Of these, more than one-half are of persons in the United States. Other countries represented in this volume by a considerable number of biographies are Argentina, Australia, Canada, France, Israel, Italy, Mexico, Scandinavian countries, South Africa, Switzerland, United Kingdom, Yugoslavia. Especially interesting is the fact that we received biographical data from individuals in remote Jewish communities, including Congo, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Hungary, Iran, Japan, Kenya, Malaya, Malta, Morocco, Trinidad, West Indies.

It will be noted that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and associated countries with the exception of Yugoslavia and Hungary, are not represented by biographies. It was with keen regret that the Editors reached the decision not to include biographies of Jews in these countries. We were told by several trustworthy friends that the situation of Jews in these countries had changed for the better since the first edition appeared, and that it may be possible to secure cooperation of individual Jews in these countries. Acting on these views, letters were written to personalities in several of these countries, without results.

The material from Israel confronted the Editors with a special problem because of the frequent use of Hebrew in the names of organizations and in titles of books, plays, etc. In a limited number of cases where Hebrew terms were translitered into Latin characters, the Editors followed the "Plan of Transliteration from Hebrew into English for General Use," recommended by a committee comprising the heads of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, the Hebrew Union College, the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the National Council for Jewish Education. The text of this plan is given in another place in this volume.

A few brief observations, regarding the pattern or format we have followed in presenting biographical data, may be in order here. After the name of each subject, appears that of the country of his permanent residence, which is not always the land of his citizenship. This is followed by the profession or occupational group to which the individual belongs, after which comes what may be termed "vital statistics" (date, place of birth, outstanding ancestry, education, marriage, children, etc.). These facts are followed by information about the individual's present position which is, in turn, followed by an outline of his career, in chronological sequence from its beginning. Then follow a list of organizational affiliations, another of literary or artistic works, a third of clubs to which the individual belongs, and another of hobbies or special interests.

The list of abbreviations in this book is, in important respects, an unusual one, because the volume contains biographies of Jews only, necessitating the inclusion of many special scholastic degrees and organizational affiliations, and also because of the international scope of the contents.

As was stated in the Preface, the Editors invite criticism, adverse as well as favorable, and will be thankful to those readers who contribute suggestions and corrections.

INTRODUCTION TO THE SECOND EDITION

by Dr. Harry Cohen, Honorary President

IT'S AN ACCEPTED truism that there's nothing so old as yesterday's newspaper. Similarly, the value and usefulness of a Who's Who also has definite time limitations, though fortunately its life is not quite that ephemeral.

A decade ago, there was produced the first edition of "Who's Who in World Jewry," a monumental work edited by Harry Schneiderman and Dr. I. J. Carmin-Karpman. Comprehensive, discriminating and universally applauded, it fulfilled a vital need in providing easy accessibility of accurate information in a world where knowledge and communications play so important a role. It was particularly significant and valuable for a people of such divergent interests and talents, and as widely dispersed, as the Jewish community. Happily, the able men who made possible the first "Who's Who in World Jewry" are available to produce a follow-up, a completely revised new edition.

The world changes in ten years, especially in an era of scientific discovery such as we have never before known. An entire continent, Africa, is in turmoil; new countries are born, boundaries change. Man, being mortal, passes on; the irreplaceable are replaced.

Since the first volume of "Who's Who in World Jewry" was published in 1955, the Jewish community and the world in general have lost a great number of individuals who had made outstanding contributions to many fields of human endeavor. The man, who more than anyone else is responsible for the atomic era, Albert Einstein, is gone. So, too, are many other notable figures in Jewish life and letters, among them the distinguished Nobel prize winner in medicine, Dr. Otto Loewi. The United States has lost its most renowned twentieth century Jew, the American statesman and philanthropist, Herbert H. Lehman. The State of Israel has suffered the loss of its second president, Itzhak Ben Zvi, Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog and Dr. Giora Josephthal. Gone, too, are such Zionist leaders as Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, Louis Lipsky and Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner.

Scholarship is the loser for the deaths of Louis Ginzberg, Joseph Klausner, Irwin Edman and Dr. Ernst Boas. That great spiritual leader and the symbol of Jewish resistance against Nazism, Dr. Leo Baeck, is dead. So, too, are such Jewish community leaders as Paul Baerwald, Frieda Warburg, Lily Montagu, Frank Weil, Herbert Abeles, Madeleine Borg, Edward A. Norman, Roger W. Straus, Maxwell Abbell, Frederick F. Greenman, and Nathan Straus.

A number of noted Jewish civil servants are also among the departed, Morris Waldman, Moses Beckelman, David W. Petegorsky, Mordecai Soltes, Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, and Samuel D. Gershowitz. The arts—literature, painting and music—sustained great losses including such literary figures as Sholom Asch, Ludwig Lewisohn, Louis Golding, Zalman Shneur, Lion Feuchtwanger, Herbert Bayard Swope, and Moss Hart. The hand of the noted artist, Max Weber, has been stilled and we have been deprived of the musical genius of Ernest Bloch and Lazar Saminsky.

It is not my province, nor am I presumptuous enough, to designate successors to those departed; but, in a sense, the entire "Who's Who in World Jewry" presents a panorama of leadership, scholarship and achievement. Whether it be in the ever-growing Israel, in the affluent Western lands, such as the United States, England or France, or in the lesser nations of the world, and even behind the Iron Curtain, there are Jews making their contributions in the fields of science, art, business, politics, education, religion and philanthropy—in every other form of human endeavor.

The Jewish world—still rebuilding from the nihilism of Hitlerism—is a changed community. There is little or no German-Jewish community; not much more in all of Central and Eastern Europe that for so many years was the fountainhead of Jewish life and expression. There are now two centers of Jewish life—the United States and Israel, and a huge possible reservoir, Soviet Russia, which we hope soon will be released from the spiritual servitude it now suffers.

There are some thirteen million Jews in the world of the middle 1960's—from five and a half to six million Americans, over two and a half million Israelis, and three million Russians. The others are dispersed throughout the world—a true diaspora, but with many of them—for good reason—thinking and dreaming of next year in Jerusalem.

Israel not quite seventeen years old, has given a new dimension to Jewish life. It has not only emerged as a unique, democratic state that is a home for those Jews who have chosen to live there, but it has enhanced the status and prestige of Jews the world over. Its people, its leaders, its scientists, its musicians and its artists are included in the pages of this Who's Who, a living Jewish Hall of Fame. So, too, as in the past, are the elite of all the nations of the world. With a possible omission here, and an exception there, within these covers are listed the cream of world Jewry. They are a group that will compare more than favorably with any similar group of whatever nationality, religion or ethnic background.

The first volume of "Who's Who in World Jewry" is already enshrined in history, almost ancient history, because during the past decade so many new faces have emerged in the spotlight of achievement, and so many new contributions have been made to world betterment by those already included in our first edition. With the first edition out of date, and out of print, the publication of a new edition was mandatory. The Sponsors and Editors of this new "Who's Who in World Jewry" trust that our new effort will meet with the same approval and that it will become a part of every home and every library and school, so that the world can have visible and ready evidence of what a small minority of the world's people has contributed to the betterment of all humanity.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

NOTE ON TRANSLITERATION FROM HEBREW INTO ENGLISH.

In transliterating from Hebrew into English characters, the editors followed the plan recommended in 1936 by representatives of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, the Hebrew Union College, the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the National Council for Jewish Education. This plan, which was published in Jewish Education, Vol. 8, No. 2, April-June 1936, page 89, recommends that the equivalence indicated below be used for Hebrew characters, vowels, etc.

Consonants

ט	ח	ז	ו	ה*	ד	ג	ב	בּ
t	h	z	v	h	d	g	b	b

פ	ס	נ	מ	ל	כ	כּ	י
p	s	n	m	l	kh	k	y

ת	תּ	שׁ	שׂ	ר	ק	צ	פּ
t	t	s	sh	r	k	z	f

א and ע are to be represented by their vowels only.

Vowels

Long and short vowels are not to be differentiated. Hatafim are to be represented by the value of the corresponding full vowel.

ָ ַ ֲ = a

ֻ ּ = u

Sheva

Sheva Quiescent is not to be represented. Sheva Mobile is to be represented by e.

Dagesh

Dagesh Lene is to be represented as shown in transliteration of consonants.

Dagesh Forte is to be represented by doubling the letter, except in the case of sh.

Definite Article and Prepositions

The article is to be represented by h with the vowel called for by grammatical rules, to be followed by a hyphen.

The prepositions בּ, כ, ל, מ, are to be represented in a similar manner.

Common Biblical Names and Terms

For common Biblical names, the transliteration of the Jewish Publication Society translation of the Holy Scriptures is to be followed. Similarly, for ordinary non-scientific purposes the spelling of common names and terms which has gained currency is to be used. Whenever it is desired, for some special reason, to emphasize the exact Hebrew spelling or pronunciation, the rules for transliteration should be used.

*In all positions.
