Biographies 1
Soviet Jewry 609

Preface

WHO'S WHO IN WORLD JEWRY has become the standard Jewish contemporary biographical reference since it was first published three decades ago. The guiding principle behind such a venture is to chronicle the lives of individuals who merit distinction for their achievements in the arts, sciences, government, academia, business and Jewish communal life. These are Jewish men and women whose achievements and contributions to society make them subjects of widespread interest and inquiry.

This new edition, the seventh in the series, continues to uphold that tradition while including several major improvements, most notably:

- a higher standard of thoroughness in the researching and editing process, making this the most accurate and comprehensive volume to date;
- a broad range of entries, including outstanding Jewish men and women from more than 70 countries;
- the inclusion of photographs of those biographees who chose to have their photos included;
- and a special reference section on Soviet Jewish Refuseniks to highlight their plight by listing names, faces and details, adding up to a powerful, and personal, testimony of both Soviet persecution and individual Jewish heroism. This section, compiled with the assistance of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, is subdivided into four groups: Long-Term Refuseniks, who have sought to emigrate from the USSR for as long as 17 years; Prisoners of Conscience who are in prison; Prisoners of Conscience who have completed their prison terms but have still been denied permission to emigrate; and a group of scientists also awaiting permission.

Since WHO'S WHO serves as a compendium of the world's most outstanding Jews, linking our brethren throughout the world, we are most proud that the unique Soviet Jewry Refusenik section helps strengthen that connection.

The majority of the biographical information in this volume comes from the biographees themselves, providing current and accurate information. In cases where the reference-worthy individual failed to submit biographical data, WHO'S WHO staff sought to gather the information through independent research. Biographies compiled in this way are denoted by an asterisk.

The process was long and thorough: potential biographees were identified by members of our advisory boards, researchers and editors. Candidates were sent a form and invited to submit information regarding their biographies and careers. These in turn were reviewed, and those who met the selection criteria were sent back their completed sketches for pre-publication review to insure accuracy.

Ultimate selection was based on reference value, the virtue of an individual's position and/or noteworthy achievements that have proved to be of significant value to society and/or Jewish life. It should be noted that purchase of the book is never a factor in the selection of biographees.

For all the care and research that went into preparing this volume, it is inevitable that it contains some errors. Readers are invited to notify the editors of errors so that corrective measures can be taken in future editions.
